He was hauled before Justice Bloom. The complaint of the trooper was that the old man was drunk and had made some sarcastic remark to him while on his horse. He struck him with his riot stick, knocked him down on the street, and left him in a very bad condition. The justice made the old man pay the costs of the case and assessed no fine. This is only one of a dozen similar cases. Another case was called to my attention by the brother of the man arrested. He came here and made complaint to me that his brother, while on the way to the station with his mother to take a train to New York, was struck down by one of the troopers and thrown into prison. His brother is in prison yet, so far as I know. I don t know as you care for report of a conversation over the telephone, but after the constabulary had been here several days Mr. R. S. Taylor, attorney for the steel company, called me up on the phone, wanting to know before what justice the prisoners arrested by the troopers would be tried. I answered Mr. Taylor that the constabulary had made these arrests; confined these men in the plant o.f the steel company without notifying the burgess or myself; that I did not care a what justice he had them brought before; that there were four justices in the town....
