The measures are based upon three spectrograms measured by Adams, Humason, and Joy. An approximate scale of intensities is added, together with a few identifications. The wave-length of the enhanced line of iron at A 4584 is affected by the head of the titanium oxide fluting near this point. The identification of the three enhanced lines of iron seems to be conclusive (especially as the enhanced lines A A 4924 and 5018 are also present on the photographs), but attempts to identify the other lines have been unsuccessful as they do not appear in the tables of the arc or the enhanced lines of the ordinary elements. The line at A 4244 is of especial interest since it appears to be present as a faint bright line in many stars of the normal M-type such as p. Gcminorum and a Orionis. There can be little doubt that the spectrum of these stars is allied closely to that of the well-known southern variable 77 Carina. A comparison of the results with those published by Moore and Sanford for the latter star-shows all of these bright lines to be present in much the same relative intensity. It seems probable, therefore, that we are dealing here with a class of variables of great interest spectroscopically. We hope to be able to continue the study of the spectra of these stars with the aid of higher dispersion. W. S. Adams, A. H. Joy and M....
