Excerpt: .at Tortosa and at Barcelona, is identical with that of Koch, also with that of Van Ermengem, but differs from that of Finckler and Prior, found in sporadic cholera. The morphology of the phytoparasite as set forth by Dr. Ferran is confirmed by the conclusions of the Commission. Hypodermic injections of the liquids of culture have, with the guinea-pig, a pathogenic action analogous to that of Asiatic cholera--marked coldness, convulsive movements, and blueness, but without producing in the method of operating, the gastrointestinal disturbances and subordinate symptoms. Infected blood reproduces the characteristic forms of the micro-organism, which is again transmissible. To this report were added clinical accounts of twenty persons vaccinated by Dr. Ferran. The same phenomena were observed, but with less development and violence, seeing the small quantity injected. Eight of them, who submitted to a second inoculation of more active culture, showed...
